

European University

European Universities are transnational university alliances which aim at building a joint European Education Area. As "Universities of the Future", they provide excellent education and research, promote sustainability and foster the European identity.

EU Flagship Initiative

A new generation of Europeans is studying, teaching, and researching in different languages across national and disciplinary boundaries. Together, they are tackling the social challenges of our time and strengthening the European higher education sector.

As ATHENA alliance we are building a university of the future!

Co-funded by the Erasmus+ Programme

What is ATHENA?

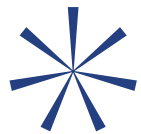

Advanced Technology Higher Education Network Alliance

The ATHENA European University aims to provide inclusive, innovative, and high-quality education. Its founding members are medium-sized European universities that are working together closely both in research and teaching and are creating a joint educational offer. A particular focus on physical and virtual mobility and a wide range of courses tailored to individual interests allow for flexible study options in a truly European environment.

Targeting global market needs and offering excellent training opportunities permit students and doctoral candidates to enter a career quickly and successfully, which is beneficial to both companies and society. Supported by regional industry partners, new findings and research results are brought back to the society.
